CLEARING HOUSE COMMITTEE MEETS

Outlines Work in Campaign for Geo. Gas Cert. Ind. 5's...... 1061/2 106 Locating Reserve Bank in Washington.

Every one of the five members of the special Clearing House committee was assigned the duty of preparing arguments to show why Washington should be selected as the location of one of the regional reserve banks, at the meeting of the committee today. The committee, composed of A. G. Clapham, W. T. Galliber, H. H. Mc-Kee, George W. White, and John Poole, met at the Commercial National Bank at 10 o'clock this morning and discussed the matter to be collected and submitted to the Secretaries of the Treasury and Agriculture when they hold hearings in this city January 12-17, to listen to Washington's arguments in favor of the Capital's selection.

The chairman of the committee, Mr. tlapham, has received numerous letters from bankers in Virginia and North Carolina stating that they favor the location of one of the regional banks at Washington. They point out that inasmuch as this will be the head of the spring and the place for meeting of the regional banks ought also to be located here.

The directors of the Board of Trade favor of the Capital's selection. will meet next Monday afternoon, at which time, it was stated by President Rudolph today, the campaign to assist he clearing house in impressing the deeral organization committee with ashington's claims will be taken up.

Captain Marsh, a Missouri river boatman all his life, still retains a vivid recollection of conditions surrounding the bringing of the news of the massacre, and which was preceded by several days of intense anxiety as his little vessel was lying in the river, a comparatively short distance from the scene of one of America's greatest tragedies.
"We were waiting for orders," says
Captain Marsh, relating the old story,
"when an Indian, naked and frightened, made his way out of the bush, the palm of his right hand held toward us indicating that his mission was
